

MOKENA HOME-COMING SEPT. 15-16

FIRST MOKENA VILLAGE BOARD ORGANIZED IN HOME OF VALENTINE SCHEER, UNCLE OF THE EDITOR

Mokena was settled in 1832 but the village was not incorporated until 48 years later. The community was built up more and more each year, but did not enjoy the advantages of incorporated communities, nor the fire and police protection found in incorporated towns and villages. Mokena, located in Frankfort township was under the township form of government until the beginning of the year 1880 when a group of progressive citizens of the community felt that the village had grown to the point where it was in need of a village form of government, and on June 14, 1880, an election was held for electing the first village board of trustees.

The following interesting record regarding this first election is on file in the Will County Courthouse in Joliet.

"In the matter of the Incorporation of the Village of Mokena, Will County, State of Illinois, under the General Incorporation Act.

"And now on this 16th day of June, A. D., 1880 on a canvass made by the County Judge of said Will County, assisted by P. Shanahan and P. M. Weber, Justice of the Peace, also of said county of the votes cast and of the returns of an election for Trustees of the said Village of Mokena held according to call and the order of the said County Judge on the 14th day of June A. D., 1880, it being found by them that John Cappel, Ozias McGovney, John Zahn, George Smith, Valentine Scheer, John Ulrich have received the highest number cast at election on and for Trustees. It is therefore hereby found and declared by the said County Judge that they, the said John Cappel, Ozias McGovney, John Zahn, George Smith, Valentine Scheer and John Ulrich are the duly elected Trustees of said Village of Mokena.

"State of Illinois, Will County, ss: I, William H. Zarley, Clerk of the County Court, within and for the County of Will in the State of Illinois and keeper of the records and files, therefore do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a full and correct copy of the order of said County Court, declaring the election of Trustees in the Village of Mokena, Will County, Illinois as appears from the records in my custody.

"In witness whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court at office in Joliet this 17th day of June, A. D., 1880. H. W. Zarley, Clerk."

NEWS-BULLETIN OFFICE LOCATED IN BUILDING ERECTED 90 YEARS AGO BY MARTIN HEIM

In the early days when the land about Mokena was wide open prairie, Martin Heim, grandfather of the editor, arrived here and located on a small farm on what was formerly known as the Ben Marti farm north of Mokena on Wolf road. He built a log cabin and lived here for some time.

Mr. Heim's father also came here from Germany, but did not like the wild life of the open prairie and soon returned to his native fatherland.

Martin Heim, however, remained here and decided to make this his permanent home. In the latter part of the forties he decided to open a small store in Mokena which has then not been laid out.

John McGovney had arrived here in the thirties and had purchased considerable land from the government at $1.50 per acre and then began laying out the present village. Lysander Denny, Josiah Carpenter and others followed, buying government land and laying out lots. This accounts for the many "additions" to the original village of Mokena.

Mr. Heim built a small two room house with a small attic. Here he set himself up in the mercantile business and sometime later he entered the tavern business.

When the Rock Island railroad was being built thru here in 1852, Mr. Heim, like most of the settlers in this section, worked on the railroad doing grading work.

After the railroad was in operation the little settlement finally developed into a village. More and more settlers came into the territory following the advent of the railroad and finally Mr. Heim added another good sized addition to his first little dwelling and expanded his business.

The people of that day enjoyed dancing the old time square dance, Virginia reel and waltzes. Mr. Heim ever so often would clear out his tavern and sponsor a dance which in those days was called a "ball." Several fiddlers comprised the orchestra and furnished the music for the "ball" which usually ran into the wee small hours of the morning.

The very same building which Mr. Heim erected about 90 years ago is at present occupied by the News-Bulletin printing plant. The original windows and doors are still in use. The sills of the building are black walnut hand hewn logs on some of which the very original bark is still visible as well as the axe marks.

In the stirring days of the civil war the old Heim place was the scene of many interesting gatherings and especially when some of the local boys who had enlisted in the Union Army were home on furlough would come here and relate their experiences at the front.

Mr. Heim often related the hardships the early settlers of this section had to endure. Grain was the chief crop raised and Chicago was the nearest trading center. The big metropolis which is now only an hour's ride from Mokena, was at the time of the early settlers a several days' journey through trackless open prairie and swamps. Oxen were the chief motive power. At the close of the harvest season the settlers would sack their grain and form a caravan and travel to Chicago (Continued on Back Page)

Mokena Store Of the Long Ago

The building where the old Hatch store was located is now occupied by the pool hall and ice cream parlor of August Braun known as "The Goodie Shop."

Mokena's First Mayor and His Home

The above photo shows the old home of Mokena's first mayor, Ozias McGovney who is shown in the right foreground of the picture. His son Arthur and daughter Miss Emma McGovney are also shown.

All three are now dead. The old McGovney home is still located along Front street and is now owned by Mr. Schaeffer of Mokena.

Mokena Students and Principal of 30 Years Ago

In the above picture appear some of the Mokena business men of today as they were in their student days when the old Mokena public school, now torn down, was their alma mater. Some of the students above shown have entered the professions and general business. Can you tell who they are?

Death entered the ranks of the students shown. One student, Ernst G. Tonn, and the principal, M. J. Cunningham have passed away.

Mokena School News

The S. S. Mokena weighed anchor on September 5th under the direction of Captain Dunn. The first few days were taken up with routine matters such as purchasing books, scheduling classes, and assigning lockers; but from now on there will be smooth sailing. Now let us turn and see what each cabin has been doing in the past week.

Cabin I
Cabin I, directed by Mate Snure, has fifty fine sailors, nine less than last year. We are happy to welcome fourteen new sailors into the crew. The new sailors are busy making up stories about colorful pictures. These are exhibited on charts in the cabin.

Cabin II
There are fifty-three sailors in Cabin II. The three new sailors are Irwin Holm, Charles Holm, and Richard Needman.

Mate Ferguson reports that all sailors are anxious to have a good year and they are trying to make a good beginning.

A course will be charted on the sea of Good Health with the aid of new books.

Cabin III
Cabin III of the ship, under Mate Krusemark, has thirty-eight sailors, five less than last year. One of our sailors, Virginia Neberker, has returned to ship a week late after a leave of absence. She was touring the New England States, and missed her sailor friends very much.

Cabin IV
This year cabin IV has thirty-five sailors, including two new ones named William Mutsch and Virginia Golden, who are freshmen. Figures show that we have the largest enrollment in this cabin in the past five years.

We have a new Skipper this year. Her name is Miss Pfeil. She has several ideas and we believe we will get along well.

At the head of the room are two flags which improve the appearance of the room very much. Every schoolroom in Will County has flags similar to these displayed.

Several people among us were very lucky in having their vacations out of the state this year. Ruth Lowe traveled over most of the western states. Probably of greatest interest was her tour of Carlsbad Cavern. Eleanor Hostert and Adelaide Lauffer went to the 4H club camp in Rockford, Illinois where they enjoyed a round of work and play. Catharine Reid shared her vacation in Tennessee with us when the freshmen gave speeches in English.

Mokena 4-H Club

By Betty Jean Marti

The Mokena Glad Girls 4-H club have just completed a large and very successful season in club work. Some of the girls have carried four projects and have a very good record on all. They are justly proud of the ribbons won at the county contest. Approximately 60 entries were made by this club in that contest.

August 30 the club held an achievement day program to which mothers and friends were invited. After a short business meeting a musical program was enjoyed. Several games were played and a lunch was served.

September 7 marked the grand finale for this summer's activities. The club spent a very happy evening at "Messinger's Woods" where watermelon and roasted weiners was enjoyed by all.

The club appreciates having been asked by the Civic Assn. to participate in the Home Coming exhibits on Sept. 16-18. At this time the girls will show their skill in baking powder biscuits which will be judged according to the 4-H club standards and awarded ribbons. Look for this feature at the Mokena Home Coming celebration.

Gov. Bins Will Help Build Up Reserve of Corn

The government's purchase of steel bins to provide storage space for 50,000,000 bushels of corn is another step in the ever-normal granary program to keep the corn stored at country points in the corn belt where it can be used in the future, according to Byron Gaskill, Chairman of Will County Agricultural Conservation Committee.

This Government storage space, Mr. Gaskill explained, plus the additional crib and bin space which farmers and elevators are planning to provide, will make it possible to store an adequate reserve of corn in the country.

In past years the average carry-over of corn has amounted only to about 7 percent of a normal year's corn crop. In 1933, when the first corn loan went into effect, farmers put 271,000,000 bushels of corn under loan. This reserve, however, was not sufficient to cover up the effects of the extremely severe draught of 1934, Mr. Gaskill pointed out.

The resealing program, with its storage allowance of 7 cents per bushel, gives farmers an opportunity to build up reserves which will eliminate these wide swings in price and supply.

Mr. Gaskill stressed the fact that the Government steel bin storage will be used only to store corn which is delivered to the Commodity Credit Corporation in settlement of the loans. Thru the provision for the 7-cent per bushel storage allowance, farmers are being encouraged to resell their corn and retain title to it either on their farms or in local elevators. However, any corn they deliver in settlement of the loans will be stored by the Commodity Credit Corporation until it is needed back on the farm for livestock feed or until higher corn prices justify its movement into regular trade channels. All approved elevator storage space will be utilized before any steel bin storage is placed in a community by the corporation.

The steel bins purchased by the Government, will have a capacity of 1,000 to 2,000 bushels, Mr. Gaskill said.

New Range Announced

The Frigidaire division of General Motors, have just announced a combination coal and electric range.

The electric side is a modern Frigidaire Electric Range, while the other side is for burning wood, coke, hard or soft coal or garbage. The range is designed as a circulating heater and will be a boon to those who want electric range convenience and at the same time, heat their kitchen in the winter.

Farmers Advised That War Should Not Change Plans

Farmers of Will county and of Illinois and the nation have been advised by Secretary of Agriculture H. A. Wallace to proceed with their plans as if there were no European outbreak, according to word received Saturday by Dean H. P. Rusk, of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, from Reuben Brigham, acting director of extension work for the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Acting Director Brigham's message pointed out that Secretary Wallace feels that there is little likelihood that any substantial increase in the production of major crops is desirable, certainly not in the immediate future.

Protection on both price and supply are available to American farmers through the ever-normal granary loans, while adjustment machinery of the agricultural conservation program can be used to increase production if and when advisable, it was pointed out by Secretary Wallace.

That Washington officials are taking full cognizance of the European situation as it affects American agriculture was indicated in Acting Director Brigham's word to Dean that further and more detailed information was to follow Secretary Wallace's first statement.

George Wannemacher, chairman of Ways and Means, Mrs. Fred Hentsch and Mrs. Walter Spiess, assistants to ways and means chairman.

The band will be heard at the Mokena Home Coming Friday evening and again on Saturday evening when the Frankfort Band will also play with the Mokena Band. The fine cooperative spirit displayed by these two bands is gratifying.

The Frankfort public school Alumni Association will hold their second annual picnic in the Geuther Grove next Sunday. There will be the usual games and a picnic lunch. The Alumni has had over 300 members connected with it since 1906.

Will Co., Sets School Age of Beginners at 6

Many parents are concerned at this time of the year, over the problem of entering their children in school despite the fact that they are not yet six years of age.

Where classes are not conducted for children of pre-school age, kindergarten, it is a serious mistake to start children in the first grade school unless they are six years of age very soon after school opens.

Years of experience have taught school administrators that very often the child became a mental loafer because he began his school work at too early an age. This mental loafing tends to carry on through out the child's school life.

Frequently a child develops state of nervousness far greater than would have been true if he had not been subjected to formal training at too early an age. Too, an important question that we might well ask ourselves as parents is: "Why have our children complete their schooling at too early an age?"

Much evidence points to the fact that the more mature students tend to receive greater benefits from their school training.

Do not rob a child of his birthright by rushing him through his school life in too short a time.

It is with the above thoughts in mind that the County School's office recommends that Boards of School Directors do not allow children to enter school in September unless the child is six years of age by December 1, 1939.

Will Co., Supt. Enlists Aid of Sheriff

The Superintendent of Schools' office is enlisting the aid of the sheriff and citizens generally in helping reduce the losses due to vagrants and others, trespassing on school property.

The sheriff's office has informed deputies in the various sections of the County to investigate cases of illegitimate school trespassing.

Persons living in the neighborhood of school premises can be of aid by immediately reporting cars parking on school grounds at night.

It Has Been 103 In the Shade

The past week has about broken all heat records for September. On Wednesday noon the thermometer reached 103 in the shade. Corn is very thoroughly dried out and pastures and lawns have been burned brown.

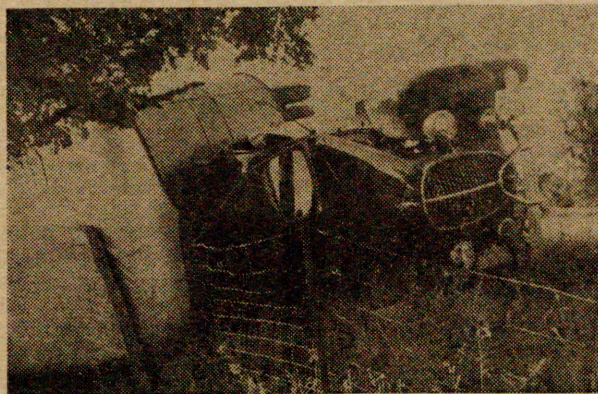

No general rain fall has occurred in this section for many weeks.

More New Houses For New Lenox

Building operations are quite active in New Lenox the past few weeks. Ceward Batson, Jr., is erecting a fine new dwelling on the former Howard Francis place on Cedar road. Ceward Batson, Jr., is erecting on the same site of the residence destroyed by fire a few years ago.

Another new house is also under construction in Brookwood Park.

Truck Turns Over, Scrambles Eggs

Last Sunday a truck overturned at the intersection of Lincoln Highway and Wolf road, containing 500 dozen of eggs.

According to Mr. Edgar and Mr. Morgers, who were driving east on Lincoln Highway, they were the third car in line followed by the truck. On approaching the intersection, two cars swung onto Lincoln highway from Wolf road. The second, a coupe with a California license, failed to stop at Lincoln Highway on approaching south from Wolf road, but swung out in front of the line, causing the cars on Lincoln highway to stop suddenly.

The truck, a trailer model, just gathering momentum after climbing the hill west of Wolf road on Lincoln Highway, tried to stop, but seeing it would plow into the cars ahead of it, took the ditch. After going about 25 feet, it overturned, but the driver and helper were not hurt.

After State Police arrived and checked the accident, Donald Koaduk of Eggerton, Minn., and his helper started unloading the eggs, preparatory to righting the truck. Inspection of the eggs showed that only one quarter of them were broken. The trucking company is owned by Donald's father.

No one was injured in the accident.

ANDREW DUELL OF TINLEY DIES IN HOSPITAL

Andrew Duell, aged 36 years, of Tinley Park, died September 12th at 2:15 a. m., in the Ingalls Memorial Hospital in Harvey.

Mr. Duell has been in poor health for sometime. He underwent a major operation on August 4th in the Billings Memorial hospital in Evanston. His case grew worse after he was home for sometime and Sept. 7th he entered the Harvey hospital.

Andrew Duell was born the son of Leonard Duell and his wife Catherine nee Schmidt, in Adelhofen, Bavaria, Germany, November 17, 1902. He came to the United States in 1927 and for awhile worked on farms in the vicinity of Tinley Park. A few months ago he took over the Tinley Park garage.

On April 16, 1929 he was united in marriage with Miss Anna Roecker of Tinley Park. To this union two children were born.

Surviving are the widow, one son Elmer, one daughter, Maryann; 3 brothers and 4 sisters and his mother, all residing in Germany.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the Hirsch Chapel to the Zion Lutheran church with Rev. Albert Buddenhagen, officiating.

Burial was made in the Tinley Park Cemetery.

Navy Enlistments Being Sought

As the U. S. Navy is materially increasing the enlisted strength of the Navy we are taking applications of all young men of the white race between the ages of 18 and 31 who can pass the required physical and mental examinations.

The prospects for enlistment are much better and that applicants who pass the requirements for enlistment will encounter very little delay in getting in the service.

This increased activity in recruiting is most decidedly not a war measure and not an anticipation of this country's becoming involved in war as a belligerent. It merely means that a large number of men will be required to fulfill our many and very definitely prescribed obligations as a neutral country during the present war between other countries.

The necessity for trained men to man modern men-of-war that make up the UNITED STATES FLEET has developed trade training far beyond that ever taught in the Navy before. Over 50 percent of the men in the service today are specialists, trained craftsmen receiving from $60 to $175 a month plus board and lodging. As vacancies occur in higher ratings advancements in the Navy during the year 1938.

The Navy offers: Healthful work the United States government as your employer, no lay-offs, thirty days vacation each year with pay, if practicable; a chance to travel, learn a trade and be paid at the same years service. Applicants for enlistment are now being accepted at the U. S. Navy Recruiting Sub-Station Room 10, New Post Office building, Aurora, Illinois.

Close New Lenox Soft Ball Games This Sunday Night

The New Lenox A. C. team will close their softball season this coming Sunday night, when they will play the noted All-Stars of Chicago Heights. The New Lenox Juniors will play a Cicero team.

Last Friday New Lenox played and defeated the Homewood Shamrocks 14 to 2. This Friday night they will play the Homewood Blues.

The New Lenox A. C. team will start the local football season with a game on the lighted field on September 24th.

New Lenox Aviator Hurt In Crackup

George Koeller, New Lenox garage man, who is also very much interested in aviation, was injured recently while flying to air races in Cleveland, Ohio. He had stopped at one place to buy gas, but instead of getting high test airplane gas he had been sold a cheaper grade and the plane fell when the motor failed to respond. In falling the plane struck a high tension wire and was badly wrecked. Mr. Koeller suffered a few cracked ribs. The accident occurred about 200 miles from Cleveland.

Housemaids Needed

Girls and women who like to do housework can always get a job. All they have to do is apply at the Illinois State Employment Service Office at 120 N. Scott St., Joliet, Manager L. Rogers advised today.

Housemaids and domestic workers are always in demand, the employment Office manager stated. Not only does the local office have numerous openings for permanent, full-time domestic workers, but it also receives thousands of calls for temporary and day workers.

"Domestic workers in private homes," said Manager Rogers, "are as a whole much better off financially than many of the women workers in industry. Board and room usually are offered in addition to salary and there is also a saving in clothes and other incidentals."

Mr. Rogers described the requirements for an ideal maid as follows:

A willing worker with a cheerful disposition and the ability to anticipate the wishes of the employer is what most housewives require. A knowledge of general household duties, such as cooking, table service, care of children, and laundry work are also necessary. Neatness is essential and all domestic workers are expected to have references.

Any girl or woman who wants to do housework and can meet these requirements is asked to get in touch with the State Employment Service Office.

Tinley Woman Attends New York Dedication

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs returned from New York City where she had gone to attend the dedication of the Illinois Building as a guest of the Illinois Commission, and incidentally to head the celebration of A Century of Progress in Horticulture in "Gardens on Parade" in the New York World's Fair. Mrs. Combs said the Fair is gigantic, monstrous; giving one a choking feeling when first entering the vast grounds, realizing so very much to see with so little time. The Foreign buildings are most interesting, educational and impressive, the like of which this generation may never have the privilege to study the economic and cultural side of lines across the sea. Again, a trip up the Hudson to Poughkeepsie, Crum Elbow, Hyde Park and the home of President Roosevelt, the little church of St. James, where the Roosevelt's for generations are laid to rest; the Town Hall where the President of the United States casts his vote, the library dedicated to his father and the school house where Eleanor Roosevelt taught were interesting sights; then the Vanderbilt mansion with its 225 acres and towering and spreading trees of many varieties, many years old.

This property is deserted now with a possibility of being taken over by a Negro known as Father Divine and his followers—tragic! Arlington, N. Y., the site of Vassar College campus. The broad avenues connecting the many buildings; Aluminae House, Avery Hall, Ely and Rockefeller halls, the Main building or administration building and twenty others, covers over 900 acres of land. The endowment funds exceed $9,500,000. Enrollment maintained approximately 1150 students. One year at Vassar costs around $5,000. New York State has much to offer the traveler these days, things of interest that will live with you through the long winter ahead, as food for thought.

The Rock Island railroad has a large force of men engaged laying new rails and ties and ballasting the right of way at New Lenox. A plank station platform is also to be erected.

Red Cross Meeting Scheduled

A meeting of the Will Co. Chapter of the American Red Cross Branch chairmen has been called for Monday evening, Sept. 18 at 7:30 p. m. As a great need for surgical dressings, garments etc., will arise as war in Europe continues, it will become necessary for each chapter to meet its share of this need.

The A. R. C. sends this material to all nations in need. No distinction is made.

The annual roll call will be also discussed. Mrs. R. McGuire, local chairman will attend this meeting.

Doing Well In Insurance

Edward Walsh of New Lenox has engaged in the real estate business and has been quite successful in selling local property.

Honored on 20th Wedding Anniversary

Last Sunday night Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary, at a dance given in their honor at Matteson.

A mock wedding was held with Mildred Steinborn, as bride's groom and Luella Hoger as the blushing bride. The bridesmaids were: Bernice and Mildred Kampe, Lucille Seeman was the flower girl while the ring bearer was Marie Harms.

Norman Hogar officiated as the minister with a charming black mustache and carried a Montgomery Ward catalog.

But alas! The wedding was stopped when it was found the couple was too young.

A short playlet was given by some of the younger generation depicting the goings-on in the life of the Stuckeys after which dancing was enjoyed until far into the night. On departing, the many friends and neighbors wished Mr. and Mrs. Stuckey many happy returns of the day.

Chas. Pfaff Gets Contract For New Frankfort Hall

Charles Pfaff, Frankfort contractor has been awarded the contract to build the new Frankfort village hall on his bid of $12,566.

The hall will be paid for out of the fund of $12,900 which Frankfort raised as its share of a proposed PWA grant which later turned out to be a colossal flop.

Frankfort is not waiting for any PWA favors but will build its own hall with its money.

The building is to be of Colonial design, will be constructed of brick and will house the fire department headquarters, village jail and village council room which will be 32x32 ft. A kitchen will also be installed and the building can be used for community purposes when desired.

The hall is not to have a basement, but instead will have an upstairs which will not be finished until some later date.

The contract stipulates that the hall must be completed by January 15, 1940.

Community Club To Meet

The Frankfort Community Club will meet in the home of Mrs. Edward Warning Thursday September 21, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Novel Expedition to South Sea Islands Probes Secret of Pacific Ocean's Origin

Coast Guard, University, Geographic Society to Sponsor Journey.

By LESLIE R. NELSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

OFF to the island-studded south Pacific this month is going a searching party—searching for facts about how and when that mighty ocean was born.

Conducted by the National Geographic society and the University of Virginia, with co-operation of the United States coast guard, a band of intrepid adventurers will follow the trail of Captain Bligh to desolate Pitcairn island. The party will visit haunts of Herman Melville and Robert Louis Stevenson, but not for romance or lovely south sea maidens.

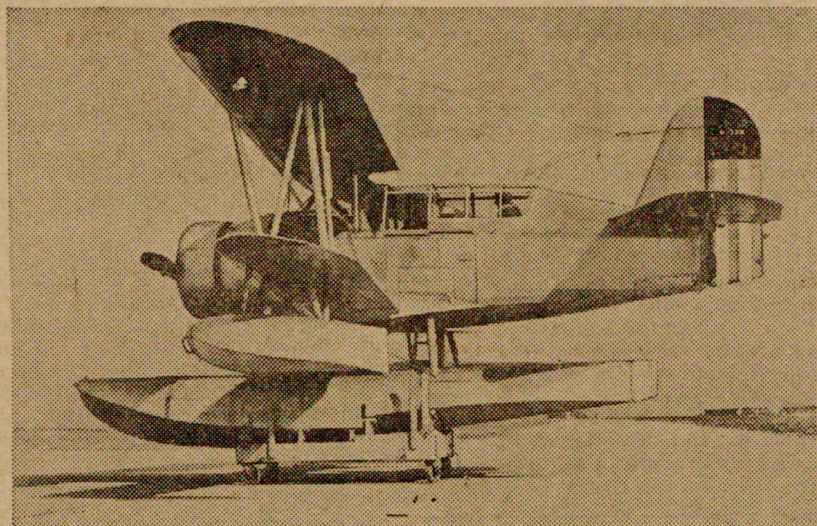

Instead they will reach down into Davy Jones' locker with depth soundings, bring up samples of sea bottom deposits, map magnetic conditions and slight differences in the pull of gravity, and fly overhead to make photographs from the air. There's romance to this journey, but not the Bligh-Stevenson-Melville variety.

Why Does Compass Veer?

From this least-known of all ocean regions they expect to wrest amazing secrets. For example, there is a mysterious magnetic influence among these islands which makes the mariner's compass veer far from the true north.

Information gathered by the expedition, which will be the first ever to make co-ordinated studies of this sort, is expected to result in safer navigation for the increasing steamer and aircraft traffic in this region. This important aspect is responsible for the close co-operation of the coast guard and for the interest of governmental officials from President Roosevelt down.

Above map shows the vast island-sprinkled area of the Pacific where the expedition will seek information important to navigation both by air and water. Scientists hope to solve the problem of the origin and age of the ocean by studying magnetism, differences in gravity, ocean depths, structure of islands and under-sea earthquake centers. Below: A sea plane of this type will be used in making aerial surveys.

The region to be surveyed covers an area of approximately 4,500,000 square miles, once and a half the size of the United States. As shown on the map, it extends from Kingman reef on the north to the Tonga and Cook islands on the south, and from Ducie island on the east to Nauru island and the Gilbert group on the west.

To Establish 20 Bases.

All these islands are owned by or are under mandate to the United States, Great Britain, France and New Zealand. They include the well-known Canton island, recently dedicated to joint use as an American and British air base; Pitcairn, home of descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty; Tahiti, and the Samoan group. The expedition plans to establish major bases on 20 or more islands, from each of which 10 to 50 islands will be examined.

Leading the expedition will be Wilbur A. Nelson, professor of geology at the University of Virginia. The National Geographic society will provide geophysicists, a geographer and a cartographer and a photographer. Experts on magnetism of the earth will be from the Carnegie institution, while the United States coast and geodetic survey will provide experts on gravity and geodesy. The National Broadcasting company will send radio engineers to investigate radio phenomena and arrange broadcasts from the remote islands.

A large coast guard vessel, equipped with a seaplane and apparatus for taking sonic depth soundings, will provide transportation.

Make Miniature Earthquakes.

Scientists have novel ways of digging out their information. Delicate and complicated instruments, to be carried to these exotic islands for the first time, will make the Pacific yield up long-kept secrets. The way a pendulum swings may give an inkling as to when the vast basin was born. Cores of mud bagged from the ocean bottom by odd "guns" will add to the story. Echoes will tell of water depth, and tiny man-made earthquakes produced by explosions on the ocean floor will indicate the type of rock lying under the deposits that have been sifting down, grain by grain, for millennia.

Since the expedition will necessarily explore many out-of-the-way islands and seldom-visited waters, it is expected to make valuable contributions to geography by checking old maps, charts and surveys, re-determining locations of islands, and gathering additional facts on soundings, channels, tides and currents.

A chart of the world's oil supplies shows the United States in No. 1 position with a 1938 production of 1,258,841,000 barrels. This was 63.2 per cent of the world output. By contrast Japan has only her Sakhalin island concessions from Russia, producing 2,400,000 barrels a year as compared with her naval requirements of 8,000,000 barrels a year. She now buys some 20,000,000 barrels annually from America.

Germany's wells produce 360,000 barrels a month, but by conquering Rumania's rich oil property she could get an additional 4,000,000 a year. Italy produces little more than 1,000,000 barrels a year.

U. S. Has Lion's Share.

America's vast oil empire extends far beyond the national borders, including rich pools in Peru, Venezuela, Colombia, parts of Rumania and Poland, and interests in Sumatra, Java and Iraq. If the United States were prodigal, it could easily supply the rest of the world with oil for many years to come.

For military purposes petroleum is now held just as important as gunpowder. For without gasoline to move equipment to the front, guns are useless. Nor do experts think any nation can store sufficient oil for more than a year's reserves in war time.

United States relations with Japan may be changed as a result of the Hitler-Stalin pact . . . The difference between the Russian and German governments is hard to figure out . . . To gain his maximum strength before the next election, the President needs poor business and a submissive congress.

WASHINGTON.—The whole course of United States relations with Japan may be changed as a result of the about face of the Hitler and Stalin governments. When congress adjourned Secretary of State Cordell Hull had already served the necessary six-months notice of abrogation of our commercial treaty with Japan. Not only was this action highly popular in the country, but it was approved on Capitol Hill by almost every faction and group of congress—from the vigorous partisans of Britain and France to the most extreme pacifists and isolationists.

Not only that, but it was obvious that if congress had stayed in session much longer there would have been serious attempts, which might have proved successful if given the slightest encouragement by the administration, to take further steps against Japan. This move might not have gone as far as was advocated by Sen. Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, who wanted an outright embargo against Nippon, but it might have approached it.

Obviously President Roosevelt, seeing that his first move against Japan had been so popular, might at any time have declared that he recognized that a state of war existed between Japan and China. This would have meant, under the present neutrality law, that this country could no longer ship "arms, ammunition and implements of war" to Japan. The only reason this is not in effect today is that Japan has never declared war, and because of fear that such an embargo might hurt China more than Japan this government has never officially recognized that war in the Orient exists.

Obviously, also, congress was set to take some step in this direction when it reconvenes, either in January at the regular session, or earlier if the President should call a special session.

Opposition to Closing Trade Door With China

This feeling, which has been widespread in the country, has been based on two factors. First, there is very general sympathy in the United States with China as against the aggressions of Japan. But second, Japan has been the ally of Germany and Italy, and as such has been disliked by all partisans of the "democracies." Up to the Hitler-Stalin pact this dislike was shared by the Communist element in this country also. In fact Japan simply did not have any friends in this country, and had hosts of enemies, whose feelings had been fanned by the various incidents, including the sinking of the gunboat Panay, and outrages on civilians.

But now the whole situation has been changed. There is no evidence that there is any friendlier feeling for Japan. Certainly there is no more sympathy with her aspirations to subjugate and govern eastern China. And there is certainly just as much violent opposition to her closing the door to United States trade with China.

But Japan is no longer the probable adversary of Britain and France in a World war—a war into which the United States might easily be drawn. So she is—for the time being certainly—no longer a possible enemy of the United States in open warfare in the pending emergency.

Poured Water on Wheels Of the Isolationist Bloc

Curiously enough the Stalin-Hitler agreement poured a lot of water on the wheels of the isolationist bloc. They are not doing much screaming from the housetops about it, yet, but they are studying it quietly, gathering ammunition for their own battle with the White House and state department in the event that congress is called back to Washington and the heat turned on to get rid of that embargo provision for "arms, ammunition and implements of war."

If the Stalin-Hitler pact proves to be only temporary, the isolationists will argue that it's fair warning of the danger of monkeying in power politics. If the pact proves to be durable as well as logical, producing peace by winning for the dictators just what they want without war, they will argue that Roosevelt's effort to define neutrality as a policy of preventing war is superfluous.

The immediate reaction in Washington to Hitler's coup is chagrin that the blind spot in a policy of defending democracy wherever it is attacked was so quickly and brutally exposed—reliance on participation in this policy of a dictatorship generally included verbally in the list of "democracies."

Of course this inclusion of the Soviet among "democracies" has always been a laugh to everybody except the so-called liberals. Unless one is for the Soviet lock, stock and barrel, one is not apt to consider Russia under its present government as anything but a dictatorship. Most people in this country do not approve either the Hitler or the Stalin methods of government. In fact the dissenting majority, who always wondered why the Soviet was called a democracy, have also been hard put to it mentally to understand just why those in this country who favor the Soviet have been so bitter against the Nazis, and why those who favor the Nazis are so bitter against the Communists.

Hard to Figure Difference Between Stalin and Hitler

If one eliminates the fact that the Stalin government has never been excited about what race a particular person springs from (not what religion, because both Stalin and Hitler have been rather tough on all religions) whereas the Nazis have no use for Jews, Negroes, or in fact any non-Aryans, the difference between the two governments is a bit hard to figure out.

So perhaps it should not have been such a blow to certain observers, including the United States state department, that the Stalin and Hitler governments have been getting together, despite the utmost efforts of Britain and France to bring the Soviet into their alliance against Hitler.

However, all these developments are making it more difficult for the President to get what he wants on neutrality legislation. They are cited as demonstration of the instability of the promises of European governments; as proofs that the United States will do well to keep out altogether.

Needs Poor Business and A Submissive Congress

Whatever critics of the New Deal, in or outside of business, may figure about what a boom between now and next January would mean politically to Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal, it is a very real question to the President.

The problem is that it is not a simple question. To attain his maximum strength from now until November, 1940, Roosevelt should have very poor business from now until January, then an utterly submissive congress to vote all the appropriations for government spending that Roosevelt may want early next spring, and finally a very real revival of business during next summer and fall.

The bad business from now until January is necessary in order to frighten congress into giving Roosevelt his own way when the lawmakers meet again. It is also necessary to prove to the country that Roosevelt knows much better than congress what is needed. Besides, it is necessary in order to put the would-be budget balancers and economy-minded group headed by Sen. Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia, Sen. Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, Walter F. George of Georgia, Alva B. Adams of Colorado, etc., in their places.

The good business that is necessary to the maximum Roosevelt strength after the new appropriations are made by a submissive congress next January is essential to provide good times so that the country will be satisfied with the New Deal when it goes to the polls in November, 1940, to elect a new President, and will vote either for Roosevelt himself, for another term, or for some candidate Roosevelt has picked.

President Believes the Old Doctrine Still Works

It is perfectly true that many of the New Dealers know little of practical politics, and do not agree with the doctrine that there must be good times if the party in power is to be retained by the voters. But Roosevelt is no tyro in politics. He knows his way around pretty well, and there is very little doubt among political observers that the President believes the old doctrine still works.

They point to the condition which was allowed to prevail during the summer and early fall of 1936. The administration so tempered the wind to the shorn lamb during that period, and for a few months prior to it, that the country had a mild boom. A great many business men decided that the Roosevelt administration was not so bad for their own profits—the only thing that influences any business man in the conduct of his business and political operations—as the Republican orators were claiming.

Fine Ethical Taste Displayed by Taft

When President Taft left the White House he went into lecturing.

"I think he enjoyed it quite as much as any other part of his career," says Mark Sullivan—an old hand at lecturing himself. "He went into it with the wish to amass a modest competence. Just before Taft left the White House, Edward Bok asked him to deliver some lectures at Hill school for which Bok would pay a fee. Taft, with some feeling, turned to his wife and said: 'You see, I told you there would be opportunities to make a living.'"

"Taft felt reluctant to practice law," added Sullivan.

Falsehoods Our Curse

Liars are the cause of all the sins and crimes in the world.—Epictetus.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorder and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

Babe straightened. She walked across the room and came back. Her lips were pressed into a straight, scarlet line; there were tiny, vertical furrows in her forehead. And finally she spoke, as though the mere fact of words might clarify her ideas.

"Listen—there's just exactly one guy in this town who might help out."

"Who?"

"She spoke in a tense whisper: 'Jeff Butler!'"

Creedon shook his head. "Who is he?"

"That lanky swamp angel: the one that lost his job at the Gardens and then got beat up by Barney Hamilton. Ever since then he's been loafing around the county swearing he was gonna get revenge . . . saying that he didn't intend to let any man get away with that sort of rough stuff."

"It's an awful long shot," commented Dan.

"Long shot—sure. But it's the only chance we got. This bird has lived around here all his life, and he knows the ropes. And whether or not he's sore enough to play ball with us—he still might give us an idea."

Dan nodded judiciously. "It might work."

"It's gotta work. Jeff Butler hates Barney Hamilton. He'd mighty well like to get a good safe crack at him."

Dan said, "Babe—ain't you goin' kinda strong?"

"What do you mean, strong?"

"This sounds like a killing you're thinking of."

"So what? Didn't Barney Hamilton kill Kirk?"

"I know . . . but look! If we got tied up with this, they'd fry us. And anyway—what can Butler do?"

She said, "I don't know. I ain't even sure he'll do anything. But I know this, Dan, he's our only hope. He's the only man in the county that hates Barney Hamilton and says so. I say let's go see him."

"He probably won't work out, you know."

"Sure I know. But we got to try him."

"What are you going to suggest to him?"

"I don't know the answer to that one, either. But after I've talked to him a few minutes . . . She put her hands on Creedon's shoulder.

"What I want you to do is this, Dan: Beat it downstairs and mosey around town. Find out where Jeff Butler lives and how to get there."

Dan rose, though with visible reluctance. "You ain't being very bright, Babe."

"We'll see. And bring Kirk's car back when you come. I'll be ready."

He returned in forty minutes. "Got the dope," he reported, "and I think I can find the place. Let's go."

They drove east—toward Big Moccasin Swamp. Their road wound into the swamp. At best, it was poor, and eventually they came to the old and untouched section of highway: a road-bed reinforced with sapling trunks. They were jolted and jounced unmercifully on this corduroy road; their wheels skidded in the deep sandy ruts. Dan Creedon gave his attention to the business of driving, and Babe Henkel sat back in her seat, staring into the cool shade under the pines. Thinking . . .

It was eerie, desolate country. The swamp weighed upon her, so that she shivered. She said, "God! How can human beings live out here?"

His answer was apparently irrelevant. "Think we'd better call it off?"

She shook her head. "No." Then, "Think you can find the place?"

"I think so. They said this was the only road."

And then they came to the cabin they sought. An old Negro, repairing the ancient harness of a bony mule with a bit of rope informed them that this was the residence of Mr. Jeff Butler, sho' nuff. They glanced uncertainly at one another as they turned from the road and progressed in second across the sandy bit of land between cabin and tool-shed.

Jeff Butler's long figure appeared on the dogtrot which bisected his cabin. His weak gray eyes blinked into the sunlight and he shaded them with a bony hand. When he squinted there were innumerable crow's-feet at the corners of his eyes, and he cocked his head at an angle as though better to focus upon his visitors. His high, nasal voice came through the morning air.

"You-all lookin' fo' somebody?"

Dan Creedon answered, "We want to see Mr. Jeff Butler."

Jeff thought it over for a moment before answering. Then he said, "I'm Jeff Butler."

They got out of the car and approached the cabin. Jeff watched them impassively, his leathery face expressionless. What he was thinking—or if he was thinking at all—they could not tell. His costume definitely informal . . . overalls and ragged shirt with sleeves cut off above the elbow. They walked to the house and onto the dogtrot.

"My name is Creedon. This is Miss Henkel."

"Yeh . . . I know."

They stood about awkwardly. Then Babe spoke.

"You here alone, Mr. Butler?"

"Yes'm . . ." Jeff was neither cordial nor hostile. He simply stood there, rocking slightly on the balls of his overlarge feet.

"This is very important," said Babe. "I want to be sure nobody can overhear us."

Jeff shrugged. "There ain't nobody heahabouts."

"Good!" Babe lowered her voice. She felt that she understood this man and knew how to handle him.

But there was one thing that Babe Henkel did not know. One vitally important thing.

Babe Henkel did not know that she was seeking help from the man who had killed Kirk Reynolds!

Jeff dragged out three can-bottomed chairs, and they seated themselves. Then Jeff asked, "What you-all cravin' to see me about?"

Babe hesitated, but only briefly. "It's about Barney Hamilton."

"Yes'm." Jeff was noncommittal. "He killed Kirk Reynolds."

Jeff swallowed, so that his Adam's apple bobbed up and down alarmingly. His shrewd, weak eyes narrowed and focused speculatively upon the orchidaceous woman opposite. But he betrayed no emotion. He merely said, "You reckon?"

"I'm sure of it."

A warm glow suffused Jeff. He had been considerably perturbed since the night he had killed Kirk, and it was pleasing to hear someone declare suspicion of another's guilt. So Jeff merely said, "He could of," and waited.

Babe talked straight. "You hate Barney Hamilton, don't you?"

"Yes'm. I reckon I do."

"He beat you up, didn't he?"

"Yes'm. He never give me no chance. Just hit me when I wasn't lookin'."

"And you'd like to see him get what's coming to him for killing Mr. Reynolds, wouldn't you?"

"Maybe."

"Then," said Babe, "you can help—if you will."

Jeff Butler produced a dirty sack of tobacco and a malodorous pipe. With fingers that were not altogether steady, he tamped the tobacco into the bowl and held a match to it.

He was thinking as swiftly and efficiently as it was possible for him to think. He was wondering whether they suspected the truth, whether they had come out here to trick him into damaging admissions. But Babe was tense and eager. Her eyes were wells of black fire. She spoke the name of Barney Hamilton with venom. Jeff said, "How come you'all to look me up?"

"Because we hate Barney Hamilton and we figure you do, too. Maybe we can work together."

Jeff grunted and nodded. His face was impassive; stolidly inscrutable. But he was pleased.

Fragments of unpleasant recollection came to him: the fight with Barney Hamilton, his own ignominious beating, the drunken stupor from which he had roused himself the following day with head splitting and pride irreparably injured.

He had turned back to his jug of raw corn liquor and sought the solitude of Big Moccasin Swamp to reflect upon the indignity which had been put upon him. He had brooded for hours, fanning himself into an unreasoning anger against Barney Hamilton. His meager brain—befogged by alcohol—had concentrated upon this single idea: that his honor had been dragged through the muck.

He convinced himself that Cathedral Gardens was a cesspool of iniquity, and that any man who destroyed a portion of it would be doing a fine community service. And so he had cut himself a lightwood knot and had lurched through the swamp that night with the idea of burning the Hamilton home. Of committing arson. Of jeopardizing human life. Of exacting revenge for the beating he had so justifiably suffered the previous day.

Half stupefied with corn liquor, and finding therein a courage which was not natural, keyed to high pitch by the magnitude of the thing he planned, Jeff Butler had skirted the Gardens and approached the house from the rear. He knew that the family would be in the front of the house, that the Negro servants had left, that the Gardens were not then open to tourists at night.

Walking stealthily, carrying his lightwood knot, making a stern effort to control jagged nerves, reflecting upon the nobility of his enterprise . . . and thoroughly terrified, Jeff Butler had come closer and closer to the house. And suddenly, in the darkness, he had collided with a man.

Instinctively he struck at the masculine figure before him. There was the bruising impact of fist on flesh; then a snarl from the man who had been hit. A snarl and a vicious threat. Jeff stumbled away. He dropped his lightwood knot and grabbed for his claspknife. At the touch of his thumb the long, keen blade sprang open. The figure of the other man came toward him: deadly, menacing, seeking combat with this man who had struck first.

Jeff slashed with his knife. The blade sank home. Scarcely a sound. And not until the body lay still did Jeff Butler realize that he had killed Kirk Reynolds.

The instinct for concealment prompted Jeff to risk detection by dragging Kirk's body to the edge of the lagoon and sliding it into the black, shallow water. He knew he was taking a desperate chance, but that—he figured—was better than being recognized en route to his home, and then of having Kirk's body found.

He escaped. He slithered away into the shadows of the night. He lurched back through the swamps to his home in Big Moccasin. And for hours he drank steadily. He was palsied with fear. And all the next day he drank until someone rode by his place and mentioned that Kirk Reynolds had been murdered, and Jeff had asked, "Who done it?"

"Dunno," said his informant, "but folks is sayin' it was Barney Hamilton or either Andy Forrest. It sho' is one hell of a mess."

Barney Hamilton! Andy Forrest! Jim Owenby! For days Jeff had felt his courage returning. Obviously, he had not been seen on that fateful night; obviously, he was not suspected. Well and good. Leave 'em think it was one of them damned aristocrats . . . though there was always the uncomfortable thought that the popular suspects might be able to prove their innocence—in which event the search would turn elsewhere. So long as no person was convicted, Jeff knew he was in danger.

That was Jeff Butler. That was the man to whom Babe Henkel had come for assistance. She was seeking to enlist the help of the murderer in an effort to avenge the murder.

Babe was surprised—and pleased—with the readiness of Jeff Butler's response. She had hardly anticipated so eager an alliance. She had sought Jeff because the lanky swamp angel was the only person in all Beauregard County whom she knew had reason to hate Barney Hamilton. And she did not know that Jeff was still thinking.

He was thinking that if anything happened to Barney Hamilton, the public would be glad enough to consider the matter closed. If a suspect has been executed for murder, the populace does not interest itself in other suspects. It is willing enough to accept the fact of punishment as proof of guilt. And so Jeff remained willing—though cautious.

Babe caught Dan Creedon's eye. The gambler nodded and Babe took the hint, pressing her advantage. She said, "They'll never do anything to Barney Hamilton for killing Mr. Reynolds, will they?"

"No ma'am. I reckon they won't. It's only us po' folks that gits punished fo' things." Then he pushed hastily, "Fo' things we never done."

"I know Barney killed him. I know why Kirk went to the Gardens that night. Mr. Dixon knows it, too, but he says that ain't evidence. They're not even going to arrest anybody. And they've told me I've got to leave Beverly."

"How come, ma'am?"

"Because I was a friend of Kirk Reynolds', that's why."

"Shuh! They never give nobody a square deal."

Babe's voice was hard but persuasive. "You hate Barney Hamilton, don't you?"

"Yes'm. I sho' do."

"Well, so do I. And I'm not going to get out of town without doing something about it."

"Yes'm . . . A man like him ain't got no right to live. He ought to be lynched . . ."

Jeff's voice trailed off. Three pairs of eyes looked startled, in recognition of the fact that a chance remark had given them their cue. Jeff repeated, "He ought to be lynched . . ."

The idea penetrated. Babe said, "If the law won't punish him—somebody ought." And she was sincere about it. She was convinced that Barney had killed Kirk. And Jeff Butler was thinking—clearly now, "Was Barney Hamilton to git hung, there wouldn't nobody never suspect me of doin' it."

The situation was sardonically perfect. Jeff was more than willing—he was eager. Babe asked, "Could we?"

Jeff nodded. "Folks heahabouts is mighty het up about things, Miss. They say the Gardens was built by the Devil. Preachers been talkin' 'bout how bad things are. An' we never did crave to have no Dam-yanks comin' down heah killin' our own folks."

Dan Creedon spoke. "Let's talk turkey, Butler. We've plenty of money, and we're willing to spend it. We'll see that you're protected if anything should go wrong. Have you any friends who will help?"

"I reckon so."

"Do you hate Barney Hamilton enough to go in on it?"

"I ain't got no use for that feller, mister. Not no use at all."

"Then, will you?"

Jeff pondered. He saw the future, if Barney were lynched. The public would know why . . . that he had been strung up because he had murdered Kirk Reynolds. And if anybody had to be punished for the lynching bee, it would be these two outlanders. Dan Creedon and Babe Henkel. Folks didn't like them no-how.

Jeff said, "I reckon it could be done, ma'am. Us folks heah in the swamp is God-fearin'. We b'lieve in right an' decency. We all the time say it would be an eye fo' an eye . . . and the law ain't aimin' to take no eye fo' somebody killin' Kirk Reynolds."

Babe asked, "Will you do it?"

"I'll try."

"When?"

"Tomorrow night maybe." Jeff blinked. "But you-all both has got to be there."

"I'll be there," said Babe.

Jeff was highly pleased. He who had murdered Kirk Reynolds was about to avenge the death of the man he had killed by directing the lynching of an innocent person. Mr. Butler's sense of humor was not highly developed, but this struck him as irresistibly funny. He was grateful to Babe and to this saturnine person, Creedon. They were furnishing the inspiration, the leadership . . . and would be the victims in case the county became suddenly righteous after the lynching.

CHAPTER XV

Jeff Butler devoted himself, with understandable enthusiasm, to the task of organizing a mob to avenge the murder which he himself had committed.

Mr. Butler recognized the value of approach on ethical grounds . . . though he had never heard the word. He knew that for more than a month the swamp angels had been fanned into a fine frenzy of indignation against the sins which were—supposedly—attributable to Cathedral Gardens and the owners thereof. He knew that his contemporaries were always responsive to the idea of a moral crusade.

Therefore—starting with the reliable Clem Ross—Mr. Butler spent the next morning and part of the afternoon visiting a meticulously selected list of friends. Men who had grievances against the constituted authorities. Men in whom class hatred was deeply rooted. He drove from cabin to cabin in a battered old farm-wagon, the wheels of which tilted at crazy angles; and in the back of that wagon was a five-gallon jug of raw corn whiskey. Mr. Butler was shrewd enough to understand that liberal draughts of the yellow fluid gave additional persuasiveness to his exhortations.

The response was invariably satisfactory. Mr. Butler, in each case, approached the matter circuitously; taking great pains to keep himself reasonably sober, though not so sober as to find himself tongue-tied. In certain cases he learned swiftly enough that he had erred in believing that these particular gentlemen would be responsive to the idea of a hanging-bee. In other cases he found that violent oratory, accompanied by much more violent whiskey—aroused the virtues of his hearers to a point where they insisted upon taking drastic action.

Mr. Butler's clinching arguments were, in all cases, identical. He impressed upon his listener of the moment the fact that pulpits had been ringing with condemnation of recent iniquities, he stated that the persons who succeeded in stamping out these evils would have done a divine service; he planted the idea that it was safe—legally and morally. He called upon Biblical precedent to prove that it was right to destroy evil and reminded his friends that Sodom and Gomorrah had been wiped out with considerable loss of life. If then—however, indirectly—the Bible approved such action, certainly the residents of Big Moccasin Swamp were entitled to conduct themselves in like manner.

There is never too great difficulty in organizing a crusade, nor appreciable trouble in rousing men of limited intelligence to venture forth in an effort to improve the moral tone of the world, particularly when there is no danger attendant upon the enterprise. Jeff Butler was shrewd enough to know how to approach his men, keen enough to understand how much to say and when to stop saying it . . . and so, by four o'clock that afternoon they commenced to gather on the dogtrot of Jeff's house where a meal of corn-bread and sausage cakes and gravy had been prepared by an ancient Negro woman. The meal finished, pipes and chewing tobacco were produced, and a new five-gallon jug appeared, filled to the brim with false courage.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

MICAH: A MESSENGER OF SOCIAL JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Micah 3:1-12; 6:8-8.
GOLDEN TEXT—What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?—Micah 6:8.

We demand human rights, social justice, and economic security. Corrupt judges and bribe-taking officials must be put out of office. Landlords must not squeeze every penny out of their tenants; loan sharks must be put out of business; the rich must not oppress the poor. The Church must have ministers with a real message and must share in the solution of the problems of humanity.

No, we did not copy that paragraph out of today's newspaper. It is the message that the prophet Micah preached more than 2,500 years ago. And what's more, he not only presented theories, but he knew how to accomplish his purpose of real social justice. It is time some of those who talk about this subject got back to the Bible and really learned how it can be done.

I. Social Injustice (3:1-10).

The inhumanity of man toward man is not something that just happened. There are fundamental reasons for such conditions, and they are the same in our time as in Micah's day. The responsibility rests squarely on the failure of our national and spiritual leaders to perform their God-given tasks.

1. Rulers without Judgment (3:1-4, 9-10).

The obligation of anyone who is given or who seeks public office is to know judgment. This does not mean only that he is to have a general knowledge of the law and its technicalities; he is to know justice in his very heart, to love it, and to see that it is always rightly administered.

The leaders of Israel had woefully failed, in fact had deliberately departed from the standards of God, and Micah exposed them in plain, dramatic, well-spoken words. While verses 2 and 3 are not to be taken literally, they do in striking figurative speech describe just what unscrupulous politicians do to an unsuspecting people.

2. Prophets with a False Message (3:5-8).

In such a day might one not expect God's messengers to have a word of condemnation for the leaders and of comfort for the people? Not only did they keep quiet about the sin and corruption which they saw about them, but they actually encouraged their prominent and wealthy "church members" in their sin by saying, "All is well." Such religious leaders have not altogether perished from the earth.

Let ministers of God be like Micah, who is described in verse 8 as a man of judgment and justice, because he was "full of power by the Spirit of the Lord."

II. Social Security (3:11, 12; 6: 6-8).

No, that idea was not discovered by the politicians of the 1930's. It has been in the plan of God from the beginning; in fact only in Him is there any real national, personal, or social security. Micah skillfully unmasked false security and revealed the way of true security.

1. False Security and Divine Judgment (3:11, 12).

When the heads of a nation "judge for reward" and its religious leaders "teach for hire" and its prophets "divine for money" (v. 11), there is no use to talk piously about God being with us.

The prophecy of verse 12 was fulfilled three times—by the Chaldeans in 586 B. C., by Titus in A. D. 70, and under Hadrian in A. D. 135. God always keeps His promises, even if the promise be a promise of judgment.

2. True Security and Divine Blessing (6:6-8).

God is not to be propitiated by the offerings of material things as a sacrifice or by any outward profession of piety. He looks at the heart.

Verse 8 is a remarkable and beautiful epitome of God's requirement of man, namely, justice, kindness, and humility; but note that this is the requirement of the law, and one which no man can possibly fulfill apart from Christ. It is evident folly for men to quote this verse as did the agnostic Thomas Huxley and others, to justify themselves for not responding to the claims of the gospel of Christ. Only Christ can make any man capable of true justice, constant kindness, and genuine humility. Only thus can we meet the demands of the law of God.

Real social justice and security will come only as there is a recognition of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord by the leaders, by the prophets and by the people.

Self Abnegation

After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade again and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself. Love waives even self-satisfaction.—Henry Drummond.

Strange Facts

Air to Float Wood
Easter Lily Is Out
Real Wash Out

Like water, the pressure of air increases with depth. For instance, if a mine shaft were 35 miles deep, the air at the bottom would be about 1,000 times as dense as that at the earth's surface, or heavy enough to float several kinds of wood and even water.

In northern Ireland it is a serious offense, punishable by a fine, to wear or carry an Easter lily on Easter Sunday, as this flower is a symbolic reminder of the unsuccessful Easter rebellion in Dublin in 1916.

Despite the fact that he was mentally deranged, Associate Justice Henry Baldwin (1779-1844) of Pennsylvania was allowed to serve for 14 years on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States because its members can be impeached only for misconduct.

In several towns along the Italian Riviera, a balcony is considered to be such an essential decorative feature of a house that those without one usually have a painted substitute, some being made more realistic by the inclusion of the family wash, which is generally hung to dry on such railings.—Collier's.

1 CAMELS were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

MEXICAN FIESTA

Exhibits at the Tinley Park Mexican Fiesta and Fall Flower Show, Sept. 7, covered the entire floor of the large gymnasium of the school. Many months of work brought about the pleasant and colorful Mexican Street Market, the setting for gay handicraft and gourds. Vegetables rich in autumnal hues were loaded into two Mexican carts. This exhibit won a special award for Mrs. Wm. Funk.

Outstanding, too, was the arrangement of sea shells by Mrs. Wm. Funk, a decidedly new and interesting study, as well the cacti and gourd arrangements.

An interesting display of cacti arranged by Mrs. Erika Mancke, president, brought much comment.

A merchandise award was presented to Mrs. Trudie Swisher for meritorious exhibits earning the highest total in points. Ears of corn, pepper and other vegetables grew into little men and children and beans became walks in the "Vegetable Landscape" arranged by Mrs. Swisher.

A garden story, appropriately illustrated with fruits, vegetables and garden material by Mrs. R. J. Hug was both instructive and interesting. An old-fashioned cart, banked up a shock of corn displayed a bountiful fall harvest. This artistic arrangement won a special award for Mesdames Harry Mager and J. C. Funk.

Mrs. Grace Hanum received special mention on her colorful tea cart arrangement of fruits and vegetables.

To Mrs. Baldwin and her committee is due the credit for the Potted Patio, green, flowering and pleasant, where potted plants and jelly were on sale.

Miniature mules carrying packs up a rugged mountain set the stage for a grab bag.

Strolling accordion and guitar players in costume enlivened the show with their Mexican music.

The pupils of Jewell Anderson's Dancing School entertained with various styles of dance.

The judges were guests at the Swisher home at an unique indoor picnic. Interest was stimulated with pennants designating the "picnic grounds," "swimming hole," and "lunch grounds."

The judges were: Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. Jones of Downers Grove; Mrs. Church of Longwood Drive, Chicago; Mrs. Schulze of Chicago Heights and Mrs. Van Wie and Mrs. Segtenhorst of Blue Island.

The club is sincerely grateful to the Tinley Park Business Men, the Parent-Teachers, Royal Neighbors, American Legion, Legion Auxiliary, Women's Club, Women's Benefit, Firemen, and Mr. Oesterich and to all for the support and co-operation given to make this show an outstanding success.

To Mrs. Baldwin, Flower Show Chairman and Mrs. Wm. Funk: We plan flower shows by dreams, by ideals and by daily work—

Through your efforts you have achieved success.

Flowers sent to ill and convalescent in Chicago were 225 bouquets on September 5th and 340 on September 12th.

The club greatly appreciates contributions from Mesdames Maurin, Dick Bruening, Lloyd, Rencink, Fay, Schreiber, Art Beck, Wallin, Emil Bettenhausen, Clemens, Selby Hirsch, Stockman, Rogers, Atkins, Klepper, Swisher, Kehres, Hartman, Marquardt, Wm Funk, Werth, J. C. Funk, B. Fulton, Bjork and Anderson.

The last shipment will be collected on September 19, with Mrs. H. Anderson in charge. Kindly call by phone if you have jelly or flowers to contribute.

The September meeting will be at the home of Mrs. R. J. Hug in Chicago.

TINLEY PARK PTA NEWS

The first P. T. A. meeting of the new term was held on Friday, Sept. 8. The library will again be our main project this year. Through the thoughtfulness of Mrs. Sandige, books from the library were available to the school children during the entire vacation. The organization voted to sponsor the text book rental system this year. We feel this system will in a short time bring the text books up to a higher standard, that is, newer types of books can be put in without any extra expense to the parents. Also, every child on the rental system will have all the books necessary for the year, seat work books included. If you do not fully understand the system, come to the school and it will be thoroughly explained to you.

In the near future our Ways and Means chairman will have a card and bunco party. Watch for further particulars. The 19th Annual Conference will be held at Midlothian on October 26 and all officers and chairmen are urged to attend. The question "What does the P. T. A. do with their money" has been asked so many times, that we are herewith making a statement of last year's receipts and disbursements. It will be readily seen that our receipts have practically all been given to the school in some form.

Lyons Starts Campaign In New Modern Trailer

Once again a shiny white trailer will take to the highways of Illinois to further the candidacy of an aspirant for high state office. Richard J. Lyons, who met with such remarkable success in his recent trailer campaign as the Republican party's nominee for United States Senator, has just been presented with the modern streamlined trailer, pictured above, as a headquarters for his governorship race, by his home, Lake County, Republican organization.

The trailer, the last word in design and construction, is fully equipped with the most modern improvements. Measuring 26 feet in length, and of full road width, this model is four feet longer than the one used last year which caused so much excitement in Illinois' turbulent political picture. Painted a bright white, it is covered with slogans in red and blue. A speaking platform with hand railings, which telescope in when not in use, is built on top. The finest public address system available has been installed in the trailer and four horns will broadcast the speeches of the dynamic Libertyville candidate. This traveling headquarters will be independent of public utility power as it travels thru the Prairie State, because its own electricity generating plant will provide it with current to operate the loudspeakers and floodlights. A Mercury coupe will pull the trailer.

Lyons is planning to install a two way short wave radio telephone system in the trailer and one in his permanent campaign headquarters, so that he can be in constant touch with developments in the campaign. In accepting the trailer from Wm. Marks, Chairman of the Lake County Republican Central Committee, Lyons said: "It is with deep gratitude that I accept this beautiful traveling headquarters. Believe me, I appreciate that it is the most modern thing on wheels. I thank you for your kind remarks about my being the pioneer in this mode of campaigning and I promise you that I'll blaze a trail thruout this great state which will make you proud of your candidate. I plan to devote all of my time from now until November of 1940 to campaigning for the Governorship. Every hamlet and every city, will have an opportunity to hear the platform and principles I base my candidacy on. My street corner speeches in Chicago in the 1938 campaign have caused the leaders there to schedule me for a series of these addresses again for this coming primary.

Keep America Out of the Slaughter House

It is with a sense of horror and of pity that we see the fools of Europe slaughtering human beings and destroying billions of dollars of property and all for what? The victor as well as the vanquished, will both be losers. Following the second war there will be a worse depression than we have experienced. It is high time that the poor, dumb fools of Europe be awakened to the follies of the world crises they create which only have one end that of ruin, misery and chaos.

The churches of the so-called Christian World instead of trying to convert the so-called "heathens" in other lands, should first of all start a movement the world over to induce men to refuse to bear arms for any government, to refuse to man any war craft on the sea or in the air and if the rulers and diplomats of the world want to fight, give them a pair of boxing gloves and let the common people have the ringside seats.

What fools we humans are. Here we raise a family and acquire a home and business and try to live at peace with our neighbors. Then some cracked war-god comes along rolls the war drums, the flag waving starts martial music in the air and behold the tranquil human is converted into a murderer and he starts on the so-called job of exterminating his fellow man. And for what?

Nationalism is preached to the masses and national honor is held up as a sacred thing to die for, but is it?

War is legalized murder and all who participate in it are legalized murderers. The Bible says "Thou shalt not kill", and does not say it is legal to commit murder in war time and illegal to kill in time of peace.

Supposing a man would kill ten persons in your town today. What a hue and cry such an act would raise and how quick the press, the church and the public would demand that the arch fiend be either executed or put away from society forever.

But in time of war if the same man killed ten of the "enemy" soldiers, we acclaim him as a hero and pin a medal on him. Yet, he is only a common murderer as far as the Biblical command "Thou shalt not kill" is concerned.

The heathen stands a better chance in the hereafter than the so-called Christian who knows it is wrong to kill and yet he does it, while the sins the heathen may commit are committed because he does not know any better.

Human beings must just be made to realize that they are fools to kill each other and destroy their countries, for in the long run war only breeds future war, for the fellow who gets licked is out for revenge and will start a bigger and better war to swat the victor.

The Church of Christ has made very small headway in Europe during its centuries of existence as old hatreds and jealousies have been carried on thru the years and the teachings of Christ mean nothing to the rulers of the world nor to a vast number of the common people of the world.

The puzzle is that after ages of freedom, more than half the population of the globe could be returned to the mess now going on in Europe. In twenty years eight hundred million people have relinquished liberties it took centuries to win; freedom of speech and the press, freedom to criticize and oppose parties in power, security of person and property—in short, all the safe guards enumerated in our Bill of Rights. Thruout two-thirds, yes maybe three-fourths of Europe and Asia, citizens are imprisoned, tortured and executed at the whim of one man. Millions of them have been starved, robbed of their savings, their land or their businesses and put at forced labor. It does not appear creditable that a few leaders, soldiers or secret police could do this to eight hundred million people who were passionately unwilling to be carried back into the Dark Ages.

This shows what dictatorship does and how people can be made slaves when they are denied free speech, free press and free radio. They are kept in darkness, for the dictators know full well, when truth enlightens the people, the power of the despot ends.

America is the only enlightened nation of the world today and we must never become tangled up with Europe's age old hates and intrigues or take part in trying to settle their differences. On the other hand we must strive to enlighten them and endeavor to make Christians of them and lead them into paths of peace.

America as a Christian nation, can do more to bind up the wounds of the world after this war by staying at peace and minding our own business, than by going to war.

The World War showed us that America made a monkey out of itself by taking sides with European countries and by trying to make the world safe for democracy by going to war for this principle.

Conflict in Europe has been habitual for centuries. If they do choose to fight, that is their business.

Now is the time for us to be calm and to resolve that if Europe must fight we must have no part of it. We must oppose any repeal of the provision in the existing neutrality law for an embargo on all arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents. If we should furnish arms to one side as it has been proposed, we would be in the war with all the consequences of war.

We must not fight. Keep our leaders and politicians in the paths of peace. We must talk up the great need for America remaining neutral. We have war jingos and war gods in America who would delight to draw us into Europe's war, but to such un-American people we would say that if they want to stick their noses in Europe's business and risk their necks, they should do it themselves, but leave the rest of us at peace. Who ever wants war let him go to Europe on his own accord but America as an enlightened and Christian nation must not be a party under any circumstances to help the fools of Europe fight.

Our slogan must be "AMERICA STAY HOME AND MIND YOUR BUSINESS AND WE WILL HAVE PLENTY TO DO."

Ten Year Period Brings Many Startling Changes

Compare trains, airplanes, automobiles, refrigerators and other objects of 10 years ago with their today's counterpart and an amazing contrast is immediately apparent. Because development of these things has been gradual, most of us take even startling improvements more or less for granted. For example, we find that 10 years ago an electric refrigerator, like Frigidaire, had at least 25 fewer features than it has today. Just one decade ago, there were no one-piece steel cabinets; no meter-miser compressors, which cut operating costs by one-half; no application of the moist cold principle, known as the "cold wall"; no automatic tray release; no instant cube release; no five zones of cold; no stainless porcelain in the food compartment; no automatic reset defroster; no F-114 low pressure refrigerant; no specially designed meat tender and vegetable and fruit hydrator. These features, in addition to many more, including beauty of cabinet design, all have been introduced in the short space of 10 years.

ORLAND PARK

A hired man about fifty-four years old known as Ben employed on the A. J. Tilley farm west of Orland Park on 143rd St., formerly the Stahulak farm, suffered a broken right leg just below the hip Tuesday afternoon when a team ran away on the farm and the wheels of a wagon ran over his leg.

The injured man was brought to Orland Park in an automobile in search of a doctor. Fire Chief John Helenhouse who has charge of the Orland Park Red Cross First Aid Station rendered valuable aid. He secured two towels from his barbershop and tore them into strips with which he tightly bound the injured man's ankles, legs and hips together to prevent the broken bone from getting further out of place. He then secured a foot-wide board and strapped the man onto it. He was then carried on the board into the office of Dr. S. S. Leavitt to await the latter's arrival.

When he came, he ordered the injured man to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet and gave orders he remain on the board until an x-ray examination could be taken. He was placed in an automobile, one end of the board resting on the top of the rear seat, the other on the top of the front. A pillow was procured and placed under the victim's head. Upon arrival at the hospital he was carried to a table board and all, for an x-ray examination. He will be a patient in the hospital for some time.

Ben was assisting in filling a silo when the accident happened.

Lacking a quorum and Mayor Wm. Kollman being absent also, the Orland Park village board was unable to hold its semi-monthly meeting Monday night. Next meeting is Sept. 25.

Mayor and Mrs. Wm. Kollman are entertaining at their guests this week, George Wachtmann and Hubert Richmann and son Russell, all of Lowden, Iowa.

Sunday a drunken driver from Posen driving a Ford sideswiped and badly damaged a Chevrolet being driven by a party from Hammond. Two other men riding in the same car were quite badly shaken up and bruised while the drunken driver who was driving alone escaped injury. He was arrested and on Monday was given a ten day jail sentence and his driver's license was revoked for thirty days.

The accident occurred at 127th

Tuesday Constable John Helenhouse was called to the Orland Lake when a colored man refused to pay 35 cents for a boat to go fishing and was making a disturbance. He was trying to use his Chicago precinct captain card to get by without paying, but when this failed to work and Constable Helenhouse was on the point of arresting him, the negro's companions paid his bill and he was released.

The Methodist Bible Class held their first meeting of the fall season on Wednesday evening in the church parlors. There was a good attendance and a good program was presented.

HOMER DEFEATS ORLAND

The Homer Aces, winner of the Jr. Southwest Suburban League proved their strength when they defeated Orland Park 9-2. Homer's ace pitcher Depra sent 14 Orland batters back to the bench via the strikeout route. The game was well played with the exception of errors by Orland which wrecked their chances of victory. L. Burdy was the leading hitter of the day with 3 hits, one of which was a long triple.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

AN EXPERIMENT IN HORSE-FEEDING

THERE'S an old story I have always liked. It is about the parsimonious Frenchman who rued the money he spent in feeding his horse.

After scheming and planning he hit upon an idea which would enable him to stop all that.

It was beautifully simple: Each day he would gradually cut down the amount of feed he gave the horse. He would cut it down so gradually, in fact, that the animal wouldn't ever realize he was being cheated.

The horse would thus become used to getting along on less. Eventually he would need no feed at all. Think of the money that would save!

The French genius scientifically set about carrying on the experiment. Several months later he was telling about it with pride in his voice. Did it work? asked a friend.

"Work? Oh, yes, indeed, it did!" he exclaimed. "It worked perfectly. Beautifully. The only trouble was that just about the time my horse got used to going without feed, he died."

We laugh at the benighted condition of a man with an idea as foolish as this, but many business men try to stop feeding their business "horse" by eliminating or cutting down on their advertising.

The fact is that advertising is the feed which keeps their business in robust health and full of energy and strength.

Many examples can be cited of the inevitable result of stopping advertising. Two will do. Forty years ago there was a remedy on the market which was America's biggest seller. It was widely, intelligently, consistently advertised. Its name was a household word. Then the founder of the business died. His heirs decided to cut out advertising because "our product is so well known people will have to buy it." The product passed out of the picture entirely.

Another was a fine, honest, well-made, well-advertised toilet soap, with all the good will any product could possibly need. The management of the business changed. The advertising stopped. Soon the product was no longer on the market.

The reason why advertising must be a continuous process is that we human beings need constant reminding. We're not fickle. But we are so filled with our own ideas and plans and businesses that if a man who wants our trade doesn't ask for it regularly and often, we drift elsewhere to the man who does.

The advertiser is faced by the problem of asking his customers to buy from him, but he also has to consider the most economical way of extending his invitation.

He finds the answer to both parts of this problem in the newspaper. No other form of advertising has ever been discovered which will carry his message so effectively for so little cost.

Homemade Jelly Wins Prize for Farmer!

LAST year Ervin Swinehart, of Exeland, Wisconsin, received a premium from the Sawyer County Agricultural Fair for his homemade chokeberry jelly.

Mr. Swinehart, who farms 240 acres, admits that his hobby is helping children. As a school officer and 4-H Club leader, he believes that no leader can be a good leader without doing the work himself—and when it comes to lessons in jellymaking, this prize winner certainly knows what he's talking about. Mr. Swinehart's cooking ability "runs in the family," too—for when his daughter, Sylvia, was only 12 years old she won first place in the International Contest.

Any man who wants to make a batch of homemade jellies would do well to use a champion recipe like this one. He'll have a perfect product every time—whether or not he enters it at the fair to compete for a prize like Mr. Swinehart's!

FRESH MINT JELLY

(Makes about 5 medium glasses)
1 cup spearmint leaves and stems, packed
3½ cups sugar
½ cup apple vinegar
1 cup water
Green coloring
½ bottle fruit pectin

Wash spearmint. Do not remove the leaves from stems.

Measure into 3-quart saucepan and press with wooden potato masher or glass. Measure sugar, vinegar and water into saucepan and mix with mint.

Bring to a boil over hottest fire. While mixture is coming to a boil, add coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. As soon as mixture boils, add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute.

Remove from fire and skim. To remove all trace of mint leaves, pour hot jelly through fine sieve into glasses. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Polish Troops Off for the Front

A section of the Polish army's cycling corps as they neared the Polish frontier to face German soldiers. Chief of Poland's combatant forces is General Kasimir Sosnkowski, who is outranked in authority only by President Ignacy Moscicki and Marshal Smigly-Rydz, the Polish strong man.

Prepared for German Tanks

"No tanks" say these effective anti-tank guns of Poland's army. Here the gunners are ready for the advancing German army on the Polish border. Officials of the Polish army place a great deal of confidence in the guns, which have proved successful in halting mechanized forces.

Polish Troops in Front Line Trenches

Polish infantry awaiting the attack of German troops on the Polish Corridor border. President Moscicki emphasized the fact that Poland's first battles were purely defensive to establish beyond all doubt that Germany is the aggressor nation. Germany's initial land attacks were from East Prussia against Dzialdowo and Mlaw; from Pomerania against Chojnice at the narrowest part of the disputed Corridor, and from Breslaw against Katowice.

Britain Transports Its Troops by Plane

Mobilization of the English army was materially hastened by use of airplanes in the rush to get troops to the continent. Above photograph shows members of the Second Battalion of the Royal Ulster Rifles boarding a plane for the front. The Soviet Union, too, has laid great stress on its troop carrying planes and its mass parachute leaps from the air. Russia, in the past few years, has carried on extensive experiments with this type of air raid and has repeatedly declared them successful. Many army officials, however, declare the mass parachute leaps impractical for war.

Germany's Iron Man

A recent photograph of Adolf Hitler, the iron man of Germany, who has led his nation into war. Frequent arbitration and mediation pleas made by diplomats of leading nations were ignored by the Reichsfuehrer.

Leads Poland's Army

Head of Poland's army of 2,000,000 men is Marshal Smigly-Rydz, second in authority only to President Ignacy Moscicki. Poles term the war as "holy"—a battle for the ideal of liberty. Smigly-Rydz was appointed commander in chief of the army and successor to President Moscicki in event the presidency should become vacant.

DESSERTS IMPORTANT IN MENU

Desserts That Are Different

Build up your menu to an interesting climax with a new and delicious dessert!

Desserts really play an important part in the menu, and in nutrition, too.

Sweets, provided in proper amounts and in the proper place in the diet, are just as necessary to good nutrition as milk, meat, fruits, vegetables and cereals.

Plan the dessert to fit the menu—a light sweet for the close of a hearty dinner, and a richer, heavier dessert to wind up the meal that is fairly simple. Consider the weather, too, and when it's hot and humid, serve sweets that are temptingly dainty. When the temperature drops and appetites perk up accordingly, desserts may be sweeter, richer and more substantial.

You'll find in this collection of tested recipes from my own kitchen a dessert for almost any occasion.

Queen of Puddings.

- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 1 tablespoon butter (melted)
- 2 egg yolks (well beaten)
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- Dash salt
- Current jelly
- 2 egg whites
- ¼ cup granulated sugar

Scald milk and pour over the soft bread crumbs. Add melted butter, and allow the mixture to stand 10 minutes. Then beat egg yolks and add to the mixture, together with 3 tablespoons sugar, the vanilla extract and the salt. Pour this mixture into a buttered baking dish, place in a pan of hot water, and bake in a slow oven (275 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45-50 minutes or until custard is firm.

Cool and spread with a layer of current jelly or strawberry jam. Cover with meringue made by beating egg whites and adding sugar slowly. Brown meringue in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for 18 minutes. Serve hot, warm or cold.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

- 1 cup sugar
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup cold water
- ¾ cup boiling water
- 3 egg yolks
- 1 tablespoon butter
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add cold water; stir until smooth. Add boiling water and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is clear and thick. Cook 3 minutes longer. Beat egg yolks; stir cooked mixture into them. Add remaining ingredients, return to flame and cook 1 minute. Pour immediately into baked pie shell. Top with meringue.

Meringue.

- 3 egg whites
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt

Beat egg whites partially; then add sugar slowly, beating until mixture is stiff. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees) for 18 minutes.

Maple Cake.

- ½ cup shortening
- 1½ cups brown sugar
- 3 eggs (separated)
- 2 teaspoons maple flavoring
- 2 cups cake flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup milk

Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar in small amounts, creaming after each addition. Add egg yolks, one at a time, continuing to beat well. Blend in the flavoring. Sift dry ingredients together, and add to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold gently into the batter. Pour into two well-greased cake pans, 9 inches in diameter and 2 inches deep. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 40 minutes. Note: This cake is especially good with a fig filling and maple-flavored frosting.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.

(Serves 5)

- 1½ cups pastry flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- 1½ squares bitter chocolate
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ cup milk
- ½ teaspoon vanilla extract
- Vanilla or peppermint candy ice cream

Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler and pour in bowl. Cool slightly; then add sugar, unbeaten egg, milk and vanilla extract. Beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients and stir until smooth. Pour into top of a well-greased double boiler and steam for 1½ hours. Serve with ice cream.

Graham Cracker Ice Cream.

- 1 cup graham cracker crumbs
- ¾ cup sugar
- 2 cups coffee cream
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine the cracker crumbs and the sugar; add cream, milk, and vanilla. Pour the mixture into the freezing container of a modern ice cream freezer; assemble the freezer, and cover. Pack with a mixture of 3 parts of crushed ice to 1 part of rock salt. Turn the crank slowly and steadily, for about 5 minutes, or until turning becomes difficult. Then carefully remove the cover, lift out the dasher, and pack down the ice cream with a spoon. Replace the cover, draw off the water, and replenish with ice and salt. Cover, and allow to harden for at least an hour before serving.

Good Old Pan Dowdy.

- 1 cup light molasses
- ¼ teaspoon allspice
- ¼ teaspoon clove
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- Apples
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter

Rich pastry
Combine molasses and spices. Arrange pared and sliced apples in a baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, and dot with butter. Pour molasses mixture over this, and cover with a rich pastry, rolled rather thick. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 45 minutes. Then cut the baked pastry top in 2-inch squares and push them down in the molasses and apple mixture. Let cool slightly. Serve with thick cream.

An Amateur Decorator Uses a Curved Needle

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: Some time ago in an article you suggested using a curved needle, such as upholsterers use, for sewing heavy cord trimming in place. I found that these needles are also used in making candle wicking bedspreads and are on sale in most notion and fancy work departments. Mine has been very useful to me; especially when reupholstering an old chair. This is just one of the many useful hints I have found in your articles and books. Thank you so much for all of them.—G. H."

Here is the picture of the curved needle used to sew bright contrasting cord to an upholstered couch. It is a useful tool when you are sewing to fabric that is stretched tightly. Everyone who finds pleasure in making a home attractive needs to know these little tricks that give work a professional touch.

Original ideas with complete directions for slipcovers; draperies and other furnishings are in the new Sewing Book No. 3. Every homemaker should have a copy; as well as everyone who likes to make gifts, and items for bazaars. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Placing the Bed.—The right place for the bed, many people seem to think, is against the wall, where it will be fairly well out of the way of the occupants of the room in the daytime. The right place for the bed is always away from the wall, so that there may be free circulation of air all around the sleeper.

Remove Paint Spots.—To remove fresh paint spots from clothing, saturate with turpentine and spirits of ammonia.

When Shirring Cloth.—Lengthen the stitch on your machine and use ruled writing paper and stitch over. The rows will then be even.

For Stains in Vase.—To remove stains from a vase or bottle, put into it two tablespoons of salt and four tablespoons of vinegar and shake well. Let stand for several hours, empty and rinse out in hot soapsuds.

Cleaning Window Shades.—Window shades may be easily washed. Spread the shade over a flat surface and rub it briskly with a sponge dipped frequently in soapsuds. Rub off the suds with a soft cloth, rinse with clear water and dry thoroughly. Do this first on one side, then on the other.

Congress Returns to the People

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

Under our Constitution the Congress of the United States represents and is responsible to the People.

But in recent years many members of both House and Senate appeared at times to forget this. Too often they surrendered their legislative responsibilities to the Executive branch, or bowed subserviently to the demands of appointed office-holders and organized pressure groups.

That is why the record of the Congress which recently ended its first session at Washington has aroused such widespread interest throughout the nation. For, in strong contrast to immediate predecessors, it reasserted a traditional independence, and, in the closing weeks, gave striking evidence of considering the will of the people above the whims of partisan leadership.

In those weeks, as every citizen recalls, the Congress enacted a measure to divorce politics from relief; it rejected administration efforts to plunge the nation still deeper into "pump priming" debts and deficits; it sought to ease the tax burdens which bear so heavily on the shoulders of workers and earners, and it offered other encouragements to all citizens who prefer representative government to any system of rule by pressure groups and bureaucratic decree.

But, as is also apparent, the record leaves much to be desired.

Despite rejection of fresh spending plans, the session established a new high in appropriations. It delayed or ignored various measures which might have hastened recovery by encouraging the reemployment of idle funds and idle men. It left serious farm and labor problems without adequate solution.

These things may or may not be corrected in later sessions. But what constituents will remember is that, in the end, Congress again assumed its responsibilities; again demonstrated that, under our system of checks and balances, it is a coordinate and not a subservient branch of government; again remembered that its fundamental duty is to the people and not to political office-holders eager for new experiments and new executive powers.

In all this the people again see hope for a return to the progress and prosperity which America enjoyed under our tried and proved form of representative government.

In it they see a return of government to the people.

The "Sunday School Lesson" published each week in this newspaper has been adopted by thousands of church instructors throughout the United States as a regular part of their weekly work.

It is a review and exposition of the international lesson for each week, prepared by Dean Harold L. Lundquist of the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago, a recognized leader in the nation's church work. Dean Lundquist has been active in teaching youthful groups for years, thereby acquiring an insight into the needs of these people for understandable explanations of Bible passages.

In view of his accomplishments in church work, it is not surprising that Dean Lundquist's exposition of the weekly Sunday School lesson is being used in almost every community of the nation. As teacher or student you will find it extremely helpful.

LOCAL PLANT SERVICES THOUSANDS

One of the Mokena industries which is producing a product that is in constant demand, is the Mitchell Brewing Co.

This plant brews and bottles many thousands of bottles of beer thruout the year and has a fleet of trucks carrying their product to Chicago and other towns in the Chicago area.

This plant has been in operation for a number of years, coming here at the return of beer.

The brewery is located in the former Bowman Dairy plant which located here in 1912. This plant continued in operation until the city of Chicago demanded that all cattle supplying milk to Chicago, be tuberculin tested. Dairy farmers in this section did not all agree with the edict, and the Bowman plant was finally closed and remained idle for a number of years until Mr. Mitchell purchased the property and opened the brewery.

The present plant employs a number of Mokena people.

An Extraordinary Stack, a Veritable Mountain of Straw

Joseph Scott of Frankfort, Ill., knows his straw stacking and how! After 25 years of experience he has practically reached perfection this year. His stack is on the McGlashan farm, now known as the McGlashan and Scott Stock and dairy farm, a place located 15 miles east of Joliet, just off of Lincoln highway on Harlem ave. This straw stack is 30 feet wide, 25 feet high and contains 70 acres of oat straw. The grain from which yielded 60 bushels to the acre, the best yield since the arrival of the chinch bugs. Most of the straw is used on the farm to keep the stock and dairy (a herd of Guernsey's) comfortable during the following season.

Frankfort's Historic Blacksmith Shop Passes Into Oblivion

Within the last few weeks a historic old landmark in Frankfort has been razed. We show herewith the dismantling of the old Schoenherr blacksmith shop in Frankfort which has been a landmark of that community for over half a century. Many a dobbie was shod in this smithy shop in the years of the past. Following Mr. Schoenherr, Edward Haake conducted a blacksmith shop in the same building but of late years the building has not been used for some time and fell into the discard.

In keeping with the passing of the old blacksmith shop is shown an old time scene of a horse and buggy tied in front of the shop.

First Mokena Village Board--

Following are the minutes of the first meeting of the Mokena Village Board of Trustees held on June 19, 1880:

The meeting was held in the home of Valentine Scheer and the Village Board was organized. Motion made by John Cappel to appoint Ozias McGovney, President of said Board. Carried.

By motion of George Smith to appoint John A. Hatch as clerk. Carried.

Motion by Valentine Scheer to appoint John Zahn as treasurer. Carried.

Motion by John Ulrich to appoint Wesley Kennedy Police Constable. Carried.

There being no further business on hand meeting adjourned to meet at the above named place June 23, 1880.

JOHN CAPPEL,

Clerk, pro-temp.

Note: Printing of ordinance let to A. G. Hawley of Lockport, Ill., for $35. The first ordinances being for peddlers, circuses, lecturers, food peddlers, peddlers with horse and wagon.

The Valentine Scheer residence referred to is now occupied by the K. Sippel Son store on Front street in Mokena.

The Mokena Village Board held their meetings in various places thruout the village. Along about 1912 the board held their meetings in an upstairs room over the Liess store which stood where the Cooper & Hostert garage is located and when this store building was destroyed by fire, the board held their meetings for a while in the waiting room of the Rock Island depot and later in the building now occupied by the Pleger store on Front St.

In 1916, about 36 years after the first Mokena Village Board was organized, the first village hall was constructed on the village lot on which the village water tower now stands. The hall is built of brick and houses the Village board room, the village jail, the pumping station and the Fire department.

The present village board consists of the following officers:

President, Harry F. Mall, Village Trustees, Albert Braun, J. G. Oswald, Wm. Semmler, Lloyd Warning, Harold Spiess and Willard Marti.

Village Clerk, Everett J. Cooper.

Village Treasurer, Miss Elmira McGovney.

Miss McGovney has the distinction of being the only woman village treasurer in Will County.

Improvements in the village have been many in the 59 years since Mokena was first incorporated. The major improvement installed 28 years after the village was incorporated was the village water tank and water works system.

Since that time many other noteworthy improvements have been made and the village takes its place with other up-to-date communities in the great metropolitan area of Chicago.

News-Bulletin Office---

(Continued from first page) where the grain was exchanged for groceries, clothing, etc. Often times the oxen would not pull a loaded wagon through a piece of swamp land and in such event the drivers would have to carry the bags of grain through the swamps and pile them on the firm ground while the empty wagon was drawn through the swamp and then reloaded again.

There was a German trading post in Chicago at that time by the name of "Schildkrant" where the settlers did most of their trading. As a reminder of the days of long ago the original black walnut bar used by Mr. Heim in his tavern is still to be seen at the News-Bulletin office. The old time wainscoting in all the rooms is still intact. White pine was extensively used for building purposes in those days and cut iron nails and spikes were used. These nails are to be found in a perfect state of preservation in the present News-Bulletin building.

The News-Bulletin office is located in that part of the building the editor's grandfather built nearly 90 years ago while the composing room and part of the printing plant is located in the larger addition built by Mr. Heim many years after he had built his two room dwelling and store.

People from every walk of life including senators and congressmen as well as executives of large corporations have called at the old historical Heim place at one time or another and especially so since the location of the News-Bulletin office in the old landmark.

With the observance of the annual Mokena Home Coming first inaugurated last year by the Mokena Civic Association, incidents and memories of the days gone by are revived and while a very few of the old timers are alive the incidents related are of interest to the younger generations, contrasting the hard time the forefathers experienced while carving a home and a community out of the virgin wilderness. We should all the more appreciate the blessings and comforts we enjoy today.

American Legion Nat'l Convention September 25-28

Indications are that the 21st national annual convention of the American Legion in Chicago, from Sept. 25 to 28 inclusive, will be the largest in attendance of any previous meeting, according to forecast by A. D. Martin, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Rock Island lines—a prediction based on reservations and inquiries received from all parts of that railway system. Confirmation of a new high record in attendance is made also by Joseph F. Bernhard, Registration Chairman of the Chicago Legion Convention Corporation.

The "American Legion On Parade" will occur on Tuesday, Sept. 26, when the march of thousands of Legionnaires will move down Michigan Avenue to Soldier Field. It is estimated that it will require nearly fifteen hours for the parade to pass the reviewing stand. Lieutenant-General Stanley H. Ford, commanding officer of the Sixth Corps Area, will be grand marshal. The parade will occur on the 21st anniversary of the opening of the Meuse-Argonne offensive of the World War, and will be featured, in addition to drum corps and various contingents, by ingenious and novel floats in greater number than registered in the 1933 Chicago Legion Convention, during the Century of Progress Exposition.

The Rock Island has made special Legion parade rates for Sept. 26 from Illinois points to Chicago, good for return the following day, with half fare for children. Special delegations will come from Peoria and Moline, and other large delegations have made reservations from St. Joseph and Trenton, Missouri, and Des Moines, Iowa.
